Message from the Director

Our association, Development for People and Nature Association (DPNA) presents itself as part of a whole from Lebanese Civil Society Associations. As other associations, DPNA is still facing challenges of sustainability and continuity and always hopes to build with the others a coalition force of social, economic and political agents of change. DPNA works with the Lebanese Civil Society Associations to maintain the rule of law, law enforcement institutions and the constitution.

DPNA works with other NGOs to address the weaknesses of the role of political parties in serving the public and political life and mitigating internal divisions and conflicts particularly sectarianism and ensuring civil peace. We address serious gaps in laws and in its non-implementation as well as advocating for authorities and decision-makers to hear the voice of the civil society and the Lebanese citizens.

The civil society has a long, tough and challenging journey in order to achieve institutional development, infrastructure and establish partnerships with the private sector with all its vital forces in different universities and sectors.

In order to establish a national plan and a national leading committee of agents of change that divide and distribute roles amongst them.

Work on reducing the alleviation of internal and external migration and rely on new national policies based on administrative decentralization and development of rural areas economy and parties.

And through the creation of a coordinative framework, regular meetings, oversight committee and advisory as well as a joint fund.

And this would be through developing a vision, a mission and similar objectives for all similar agents of change regionally and internationally.

Active Citizens - Women Participating in Public Life

Partner

The British Council

Summary

“Women Participating in Public Life” is a regional project that supports women who want to make a more valuable and lasting contribution to their societies by being actively participating in public institution locally and nationally.

The project was designed in 2012 as a direct response to the need of women who had a key role along men in shaping up their nation’s future. It started with four countries; Egypt, Libya, Tunisia and Morocco. These countries have supported women volunteering in local projects improving gender equality and the public life of their communities and trained them to implement projects of their own.

Given the success of the project, and given the needs of woman in the Levant and especially in Lebanon, we have decided to implement the project in three additional countries; Lebanon, Jordan and Palestine.

Taken from British Council website*

Activities

We give young women the power to influence and make a difference in their local communities through our British Council community leadership programme, Active Citizens. This project builds confidence, values difference and supports social action.

We help existing and emerging coalitions of women's organisations, non-governmental organisations (NGOs), authorities and media to support women's public participation. This is done through capacity-building workshops and exchange visits with leading UK women's organisations.

We provide training opportunities in action research to support partners in advocating women participation through evidence-based data. Throughout the trainings we cover other topics as advocacy, awareness raising, stakeholder analysis, and use of media.

We provide platforms for experience-sharing and learning. We run regional events including study visits, conferences and workshops to support work and share the learning.

European Union

Duration

2014-2017

The Reason Behind Net-Med Youth

“Because we believe that youth are a valued resource for every country in the region and should be an integral part of decision-making, we support their inclusion in local policy planning.”

“Because we believe that youth voices must be heard by society at large and that young people have what it takes to be today’s reporters, we strive to enhance their representation in the media.”

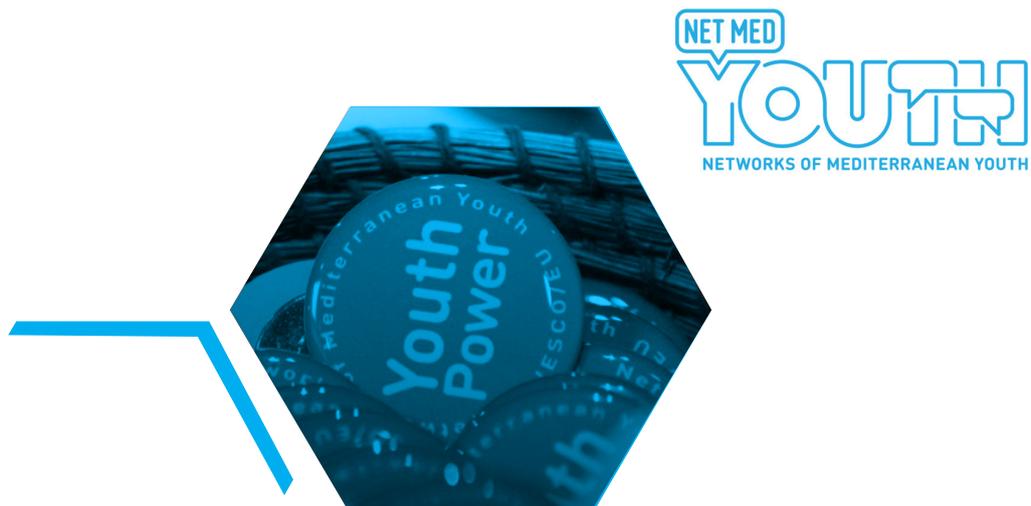

“Because we believe that youth can and should be a driving economic force in their communities, we ensure their participation in employment policy design.”

Ein Zaarour Summer Camp

Jezzine (70 km from Beirut, 22 km from Sidon/Saida) is the most famous summer and touristic resort of South Lebanon because of its beautiful landscape, fresh climate, its 40m high waterfall and the festivals during the summer. Vital public facilities contributed in making Jezzine the most important town in the area. DPNA and in partnership with Al Shalleh Club of Jezzine are managing Ein Zaarour Summer Camp Site, which aims at providing a safe and creative space for children, youth and adolescents. The summer camp also aims at welcoming organizations wishing to organize a summer camp, training, retreat, etc. It was first opened during summer of 2014, and has implemented until now more than 10 summer camps
